Report on a training course about "First Aids"

The Student Work Unit, represented by the Cultural and Social Activities and the Community Responsibility Unit at the College of Applied Medical Sciences, organized a training course about "First Aids" under the supervision of Dr. Atyat Mohammed Hassan (Coordinator of Student Activities at the College). This was on Sunday 2/2/2025 and Tuesday 4/2/2025 from 12 noon in the College Theater.

The course aimed to train female students and college staff to provide first aids for various medical conditions, and to enhance the students' ability to deal with emergency cases with confidence and efficiency.

Dr. Sahar Ali Abdul Mohsen (Associate Professor in the Nursing Department) gave a lecture on Sunday: In which she provided a comprehensive introduction to the importance of first aids and the foundations of providing emergency medical care in various cases. The course also covered the basic first aids skills that a person must possess during an emergency medical intervention, in addition to practical training in cardiopulmonary resuscitation (CPR) for children and adults.
